ICE CREAM.
My Ice Cream Manufactory, one of the largest in Virginia, still continues to supply private customers, Sunday schools, excursions, picnics, fairs, festivals and associations, as well as the trade, with that SUPERIOR ICE CREAM that has made a name in this community, and is known everywhere as BECKHAM'S ICE CREAM. I could easily reduce its price by lowering its quality, but good cream, of fresh, pure, wholesome ingredients, cannot be furnished at a less price than I serve it. Of course, I could "grade" my cream by the price, but my cream would lose the good name that years of fair dealing have won for it. I ask that persons abroad ordering "Brongle's Cream" from third parties will assure themselves that the cream sent is certainly from my establishment. I warrant my cream, and do not wish that inferior cream, sent out as mine, may injure its reputation. It is my aim to furnish the BEST ICE CREAM IN AMERICA, and my customers are satisfied that I do so.

The Death of a Race Horse.
During a three mile race last week at St. Louis between General Buford's chestnut colt McWhirter, D. Swigert's bay colt Mahlsick, Lyle & Scully's bay gelding Joe Rhodes and A. & G. M. Simpson's chestnut colt Red Bluff, McWhirter met with an accident of the most unusual character. It is described as follows in the St. Louis Times of the 6th inst.:

When McWhirter and Mahlsick came down the quarter stretch to complete the second mile it was neck and neck at a steady, even run. Sixty yards away from the string Mahlsick without increasing speed suddenly appeared in the lead. "McWhirter is giving down!" cried out some excited spectator. It was a true warning. One leg had failed him, but he kept on gallantly, for the game blood was hot. Had Knox, the little colored jockey, reined him in the life of a noble horse might have been spared and might have served in the stud for years. But supposing he could have controlled the excited animal, there stood in the way Uncle Abe's instructions, to make the race from start to finish, or in old Joe, Harper's expressive language, from "kend to end."

McWhirter "gave down." He was virtually on three legs. He rounded the lower turn, and was well into the second quarter of the last mile, there being just a perceptible slackening of the pace, when Joe Rhodes overhauled him and went by. As the horse passed him McWhirter screamed, and then it was that Knox, the rider, seized the other fore leg gave down. From that point the poor fellow plunged ahead and into the last half mile, every jump tearing tendons, muscles, flesh and skin, and Knox tugging at the reins. When at last the headway slackened and the horse came to a sudden halt, it was with the bones of both forelegs torn from the sockets of the ankle joints, and protruding six inches through hide and flesh and resting in the dirt, the hoofs lying limp and useless before. The sudden halt sent the jockey flying over the horse's head.

The scene and those that followed were, fortunately, located on the backstretch, and the little crowd of forty or fifty who went there to witness the race, saw the accident from the field glasses in the grand stand. Had the accident been finished where it began—on the last quarter—it would have spoiled the sport with many a turtlover for days to come. Many of those who went over to the backstretch turned back sick at heart after a single glance.

"Shoot him, for God's sake!" was the prompt instruction of the owner when he learned the full extent of the misfortune.

As soon as the jockey got out of the dirt he had stripped the horse of pignin and trappings and stood crying at the awful picture when the first of the spectators reached the place. McWhirter stood still pitched forward and two-thirds of his weight resting on the protruding bones for fifteen minutes, panting with the exertion of the race. The fire gleamed in his eyes and the perspiration rolled down his sides. As the little group of horrified spectators stood about him he looked around as if surprised that no trainer hurried up with the sponge and blanket. Alas! for McWhirter; not only was his last race run, but there was no more use for a "rainer."

The command to "shoot him" came perhaps fifteen minutes after the accident, for the news of the condition of McWhirter, a body at first carried to the wide field, was taken to old General Buford, the owner. When the command did come the half a dozen policemen looked at each other with no pleasant anticipation of such a task.

One Koeble, of the Fifth district, a man experienced in horse matters, undertook it. He took his stand on the left side of McWhirter and, using a Colt's navy, fired at close range. The ball struck square about midway between the eye and the base of the ear, and from the hole the streaming blood gushed forth. At the report the horse threw himself back on his haunches and struck out with his mangled forelegs, but dropped down again into the same steady position and stood there. Three times the officer leveled his weapon and fired. Each time the bullet entered the brain and the blood gushed out. At the third shot McWhirter hobbled across the track and stood by the fence. It seemed as if he would never fall. As he panted the blood would squirt out upon the fence and run from his mouth and nose in great drops. Finally the officer stepped directly in front of the now falling horse, and putting the muzzle of the pistol almost to the forehead, the ball entering right between the eyes. The horse dropped then, but it was not till long after he had been dragged into the southeast corner of the grounds, underneath the shade of a great oak, that life finally went out.

Jockeys and trainers gathered about him with the most marked manifestations of sorrow. The mane, which had been braided and tied with the Buford colors, red and white, was sheared off and carried away as keepsakes.

It was declared at first that the bones of the forelegs had been broken. To any one acquainted with the anatomy of race horses, this seemed impossible, and it proved not to have been the case. At the conclusion of the races and while the grave was being dug, General Mitchell and other well known horsemen made an examination. In one sense, perhaps, both of McWhirter's legs were broken; but it was not a bone fracture. Tendons and muscles were torn apart and the bones disjoined. The accident was what is known among horsemen as "breaking down." It happens occasionally on race tracks, but probably there has never been so aggravated a case as this. The "breaking down" of one leg occurred just before completing the second mile, and the other gave way when Joe Rhodes slipped past. After that McWhirter ran on the stumps for a furlong, crippling himself to the death.

McClure, one of the standard authorities, describes the accident as follows:—
"Breaking down—This accident means or consists in rupture of the tendons and ligaments, and occurs at once when the horse is at full speed. The horse stops suddenly, or perhaps, stumbles and falls, gets up, but stands on his forelocks, the toes of the foot turned up and the sole of the foot as it were looking at you."

Mr. Walsh, the editor of the Field, an English paper, in his book describes "breaking down" as follows: "The accident generally occurs in a bred horse when the flesh or muscles do not continue to support the ligaments, from which circumstance it so often happens in the last few strides of a race. The symptoms are a partial or entire giving way of the forelock joint downward, so that the back of it either touches the ground or nearly so when the weight is thrown upon it."

Both authorities go on to describe a treatment, but from the account already given it will be seen that, after breaking down, McWhirter, with the most wonderful endurance probably ever seen on a track, had gone on and completed his run.

Talking to a Times reporter shortly after the occurrence General Buford said: "McWhirter ought to have held him up. McWhirter hasn't complained of this training, and I only entered him to come here. I engaged him here and nowhere else. He was ridden badly at Louisville, where I gave him a trial to see how he went more than anything else, and another horse struck him on his good leg. (McWhirter has had trouble with one of his fore legs for some time past.) We have nursed him and he seemed to be all right. We used cold water on his leg and it must have made it tender. I refused $10,000 for him. He ran the greatest race ever won, and his winnings have been between $5,000 and $10,000."

The jockey who was to ride McWhirter lies at home with a fractured thigh, caused by an accident in exercising Equinox.

The St. Louis jockey club will put up a monument in McWhirter's memory and any turfman desiring to subscribe will be permitted to do so.

MEDICINAL.
VEGETINE
FOR DROPSY.
(Central Falls, R. I., Oct. 19, 1877.)
Dr. H. R. Stevens, esq.
It is a pleasure to give my testimony for your valuable medicine. I was sick for a long time with Dropsy, under the doctor's care. He said it was Water between the Heart and Lungs. I received no benefit until I commenced taking the Vegetine; in fact, I was growing worse. I have tried many remedies; they did not help me. Vegetine is the medicine for Dropsy. I began to feel better after taking a few bottles. I have taken thirty bottles in all. I am perfectly well; never felt better. No one can feel more than I do.
I am, dear sir, gratefully yours.
A. D. WHEELER.

VEGETINE
—When the blood becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from change of weather or climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the Vegetine will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body.

VEGETINE
FOR KIDNEY COMPLAINTS AND NEUROUS DEBILITY.
Essexboro, Me., Dec. 23, 1877.
H. R. Stevens, esq.
Dear Sir—I had a cough, for eighteen years, when I commenced taking the Vegetine. It was very low, my system was debilitated by disease. I had the Kidney Complaint, and was very nervous—tough bad, lung sore. When I had taken one bottle I found that it was helping me; it has helped my cough, and strengthened me. I am now able to do my work. Never have found any thing like the Vegetine. I know it is every thing it is recommended to be.
Mrs. A. J. PENDLETON.

VEGETINE
—A nourishing and strengthening; purifies the blood; regulates the bowels; cleanses the nervous system; acts as a tonic on the sedations; and arouses the whole system to action.

VEGETINE
FOR SICK HEADACHE
Evansville, Ind., Jan. 1, 1878.
Mr. H. R. Stevens:
Dear Sir—I have used your Vegetine for Sick Headache, and have greatly benefited thereby. I have every reason to believe it to be a good medicine.
Yours very respectfully,
Mrs. JAMES CONNOR,
411 Third street.

VEGETINE
—There are various causes for headache, as derangement of the circulating system, of the digestive organs, of the nervous system, &c. Vegetine can be said to be a remedy for the many kinds of headache as it acts directly upon the various causes of this complaint. Nervousness, Indigestion, Costiveness, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Biliousness, &c. Try the Vegetine. You will never regret it.

VEGETINE
DOCTOR'S REPORT.
Dr. Chas. M. Duddenhausen, Apothecary,
Evansville, Ind.
The doctor writes: I have a large number of good customers who take Vegetine. They all speak well of it. I know it is a good medicine for the complaints for which it is recommended.
December 27, 1877.
